Li

In China, we celebrate the Mid-Autumn Festival. It's also called the Moon Festival. Families gather to enjoy a special dinner and eat mooncakes, which are sweet pastries. The night sky is filled with lanterns, making it a beautiful sight.

Sam

I'm from Australia. We have a fun festival called Australia Day on January 26. People enjoy outdoor activities like barbecues and beach parties. There are fireworks at night, and everyone wears patriotic colours.

Haruki

I'm from Japan, and we celebrate Sakura Matsuri, the Cherry Blossom Festival. It happens in spring when cherry blossoms bloom. People have picnics under the cherry trees, enjoying beautiful flowers. There are traditional dances and performances. It's a time to appreciate nature's beauty.

SENARYO 1

Learning Outcome: 10.8.R1. Students will be able to scan a text about the evolution of technology for specific information.

4. Read the text below and answer the questions.

In the 1980s, the first cell phones were big and heavy, like a brick. You could only use them to talk, and calls were expensive. In the 1990s, phones got smaller and lighter. This is also when texting became a popular way to chat with friends. Around the year 2000, cameras were added to cell phones, so we could take pictures with them. Cell phones got Internet access, letting us explore the web and play games in 2010s. Today, our cell phones are like small computers! We can do almost everything with them.

a. When did texting become a popular way to chat?

b. In what ways did people use the cell phones in 2010s?
